POLITICS WILL COUNT. The changes suggested in the foregoing are such as would be determined on a strict basis of population. However, that will not be the only thing considered in the new apportionment. Politics will enter into the question largely and changes may be made for political reasons that otherwise would not be considered. The Republicans control the Legislature and they will probably do as the Democrats would do were they in power-make the apportionment according to party interests where this can be done and give the people fair and equitable representation. For instance, if two doubtful districts can be arranged into one relably Democratic and one reliably Republican, without working injustice to the citizens of the districts, that will probcan be reaarranged so that two of them will ably be done. Or if three doubtful districts be Republican and one Democratic, that change may reasonably be expected. However, there are few districts in the State that could be so juggled by either party as to be decidedly to its advantage. If the Democrats were to make the reapportionment they might be able to bring about changes that would make more doubtful districts, and therefore give them a better fighting chance of carrying the State Legislature at the next election, but under present conditions it is practically impossible for the Republicans to redistrict the State so as to increase their strength materially. The result of the late election may show a few districts that can be changed to an advantage, but the number is very small.

There will be doubtless a number of representatives and senators who will come forward with changes which they desire in order to strengthen their respective districts, but in the main such changes would be inimical to the interests of the party at large, and it is not considered good politics for the Republicans to further the interests of the individual members of either house at a sacrifice to the party.

According to the statements of the Republican leaders in both branches of the General Assembly the reapportionment will be made carefully and a change will be made only after full consideration.

of Interior Regarding the Republie's Foreign Relations.

CARACAS, Nov. 23.-Discussing Venezuela's foreign relations, Dr. Lopez Baral, minister of the interior, said: "Towards the United States Venezuela entertains the kindliest feelings of friendship, and she remembers with gratitude the attitude of the great republic in the past. Venezuela is determined, as far as she is concerned, that nothing shall occur to disturb in the slightest degree the existing understanding with the American legation and the friendly relations between the two countries. Venezuela has nothing to complain of regarding the way in which the various unimportant questions have been treated, and, except for some pending questions, her foreign relations have been of a cordial character. The English government at Trinidad published a few days ago an official decree declaring the blockade of the Orinoco null and void. If there is any place where the blockade is effective it is the Orinoco, for besides the land defenses, we have maintained several gunboats which have efficiently performed there all the duties pertaining to a blockade.

"The English, too, are inconsistent, for while one journal at Trinidad published the decree declaring the blockade to be ineffective, the Mirror, another publication, ing the bandits before carrying out the insists that Venezuela is loyally fulfilling her international duty in this respect. The British sloop of war Phantom entered the Orinoco without permission, and President Castro has directed a protest against this infringement on Venezuelan sovereignty. It has been recognized that the principal foreign ships shall ask permission to enter the mouth of the river, and we cannot understand the disregard of this rule. A similar protest has been sent regarding the action of the German warship Panther, which also entered the Orinoco without permission. "Another act which has provoked astonishment was the hoisting of the British flags on the Island of Patos. Venezuela's right to this island cannot be questioned Geographically, historically and politically it is Venezuelan territory. With the Island of Trinidad it is recognized as forming part of the old Spanish colony by the treaty of Amiens. Trinidad was ceded to Great Britain, but Patos island remained and was recognized as an integral part of Venezuela. The English claim to Patos island was based on the act of the former Spanish Governor, which was not recognized by Spain. If further evidences of Venezuela's rights were needed the fact that the island is situated scarcely three miles from the Venezuelan mainland, while it is ten miles from Trinidad, is sufficient. The impregnability of Venezuela's position is shown by the facility with which we have replie to every argument in support of the British contention advanced by the Ministry of that country. Long After the Funeral.

Arizona Republican. Readers will no doubt remember a story of some length printed a few months ago describing the death of D. P. Kyle in a smallpox ward of the Madison, Ind., General Army Hospital in the winter of 1864.65. It also described how he was buried and his personal effects sent home, and how afterward it proved to be the man in the next bed that was buried, the false report' having gained currency through the fact that when the man next to him died Mr. Kyle was moved up one berth into his place and under the card suspended over the bed telling who the occupant was. The cards were not changed, and the chaplain finding a corpse and Mr. Kyle's empty berth very naturally prayed for the rest of Mr. Kyle's soul and buried the other man under an assumed name,

That was thirty-seven years ago, and though Mr. Kyle has often told the story he never could conjure up a living witness till one day last week when A. E. Macomber, who is engaged in the lumber business in northern Arizona, came to Phenix. He hunted up Mr. Kyle, who did not recognize him, when the following conversation en-

MANILA, Nov. 23 .- Silver has suffered a further decline in value. The government has issued a proclamation making the official rate 260 for 100 gold. The former rate was 250. The possibility of the adoption by the Straits Settlement of a gold standard and the reports current that Mexico is about to abandon the silver standard have greatly weakened the Indian and Asiatic silver market. Large quantities of Mexican silver are coming here from China, as it is believed that much gold is being circulated here on account of government expenditures. The fact is that American trade is going to China and the losses in silver are seriously affecting the insular treasury and business interests generally. The rapidly changing rates embarrass the busines houses, making it almost impossible to fix prices. BACKBITING PROHIBITED.

Park Caretaker Stops Uncharitable Talk Within His Jurisdiction. Detroit Free Press.

"There is more going on in the way of civic improvement than the casual bystander has any idea of," laughingly remarked a clever clubwoman. "The other day, walking with a friend, I was resting a bit on a bench in one of the smaller parks, when my attention was attracted by two noisy talkers on another bench not far away from us. The two well-dressed women-for women they were-were so absorbed in energetically discussing a mutual acquaintance, also a woman, that they were wholly oblivious of us, or of the world at large. Very maliciously and loudly they commented upon the absent Eliza's home, husband, housekeeping, children, and clothes; neither of the women had a good word to say for poor Eliza. While we were shocked, we could not help being a trifle entertained as well, but there was more entertainment in store. "Near us, on another bench, sat a plainly dressed man, with a sensible, frank, yet omewhat determined countenance. He also was listening to the two women engaged in dissecting Eliza. Then suddenly he arose and walked over to them. Great was our astonishment when he said, sternly: 'Now, you stop that backbiting or go right out of this here park.' "Both women glared at him, and one of them angrily said, 'What do you mean, "'I mean what I say,' the man answered. You stop that backbiting, or leave. Maybe you don't know who I am. I'm the caretaker of this here park. "Then he lifted his coat lapel, and exhibited his badge of authority. 'I'm instructed,' he went on, 'not to allow no rowdying in here, and no low conduct; backbiting is low conduct-it's worse than rowdying, and I won't have it. No. sir; no backbiting allowed in this here park so if you two ladies wants to keep on backbiting you'll have to go somewhere else. I'm going to keep this here park decent if I lose my job, and backbiting ain't decent—no, it ain't.' "The two women looked at each other and then at us in a sheepish manner; then they arose and strolled away, muttering something. The caretaker walked off in another direction; and we, also, moved on, feeling that we had been free spectators at a highly interesting episode. Surely, it is a rare and valued privilege to live in a city where backbiting is not allowed in the

DON'T WANT STATEHOOD. People of Indian Territory Prefer

Present Status.

New York Journal. If Z. T. Burton, of Tishomingo, I. T., When Falkner returned to the hotel at voices the sentiments of the Indian Territory in general, there is no clamoring for immediate statehood in that part of the country. And his views are acceded to by divided, and while some do not want any thing to be done others are asking for complete statehood. But there is no crystallized view, and, according to Mr. Burton, the territory is in no condition now for statehood, and for such to be secured at this time would only present a knotty problem in the way of taxation of Indian lands for Congress to settle. "The Indian lands are being allotted to the individual Indians now, and this will require four years," said Mr. Burton. "In that time we may be ready for statehood, and Congress may be asked to grant it, but I don't think the way is clear now for making the Territory a state or part of a state. The Indian government is now in effect, but this will expire at the end of four years by limitation of the law, and secured and perhaps statehood. As it is pounds heavier to the man. "What will their politics be?" he wi "Of course this is bound to be divided but at this time there is little in the way of politics among the Indians. None is running around proclaiming belief in the Democratic or the Republican party." WORKING WOMEN.

Their Condition as Found by a Cleve land Charities Official.

Buffalo Courier. At Cleveland, a charities official has been looking into the condition of the working women of that municipality, finding that while the average cost of living for a woman of this class is $5.24, the average wage is but $4.23. He says: "To those who are permitted to see it the tragedy of our mod-ern industrial and social system is appailing. The cruel and unjust conditions really cause a ruin and degradation of life a hun dred fold more than the things reformers are most prone to attack." What is true of Cleveland no doubt is true of other large cities. The cost of living has increased by leaps, as the result of the monopolization o necessities, but there has been little, if any, increase of the working woman's pit-tance. Such are the melancholy facts in a time of large but ill-distributed prosperity. The country must have a political and moral awakening before long, else the masses will sink to a plane both lamentable for its miseries and fraught with danger to public order. Those who legislate for the people should appreciate the situation as it exists. Perhaps they do, but are in-capable of resisting the influences by which the government is controlled. The nation is greater than ever before in material wealth and power, yet is developing weak-nesses heretofore unknown, which, if not repaired in time, may prove destructive to the civic health.

New York in a Bad Way.

Letter in New York Evening Post. It has reached the point to-day where a man of any self-respect cannot take his sister to a theater without first acquainting himself through the honest press critic of the fitness of the show. The stranger, or the person who has been out of town when the press reviews were first published, is entirely at a loss. There are on the New York stage to-day one or two plays that outrage all decency, I am by no means a prude, and I claim no moral superiority over my fellow-men, but on coming out of a theater recently it was impossible for me to look any woman in the theater straight in the face.
